mentions Metaxas: CT "cited his behavior in general as 'profoundly immoral,' his character as 'grossly' so. But these subjective pronouncements promote a perversion of Christian doctrine, which holds that all are depraved and equally in need of God's grace."

2/ Mr. Graham, Your comments seem to draw upon the truth of Romans 3:23 that "all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God." The idea is that no one should "boast" of their perfection before God (verse 27).

mentions Metaxas insinuates the conspiracy theory that the Deep State was trying to reverse the election. "Perhaps voters could be excused for hoping to pry Old Glory from the grasp of unelected J. Edgar Hoovers at the Federal Bureau of Investigation." But:

mentions Eric Metaxas says one can't distinguish Trump's impulsive cruelty from Jesus' clearing the temple of greedy merchants because they're both forms of anger. "Or must one now assume Jesus was an angry white male without access to mental-health care?"

mentions Also Metaxas cites abortion as the reason to vote Republican. But 1. Why Trump? And 2. There are almost certainly millions more abortions under Trump than there would have been under Hillary because he has done so much to limit access to contraceptives.

Andy Rowell
@AndyRowell

"he believed Trump would reduce the number of abortions in the country."

But what reduces the number of abortions tends to be more access to contraception (not reducing access to abortion) so pro-life GOP efforts do not reduce the number of abortions!

mentions Eric Metaxas says it is preposterous to say Trump's behavior is impeachable because Jesus too acted in anger when he drove out those selling religious goods in the temple. 😏
But I think the parallel is that Metaxas and friends would be driven out.

But a recent editorial calling for Pres Trump's removal confirmed the magazine's missionary creep toward that Slough of Despond populated by liberal elites and Joe Biden. It's myopic to focus on his personal behavior when important moral issues like abortion are at stake.

For those of us alive to this strange moment in history, arguments that this president's inchoate moral failings somehow require his removal from office seem not only disproportionate, but preposterous. Christians worship a man who flipped over the tables of corrupt mentions I just read your most recent post about the evils of "paganistan". It made me realize that we need to stand up and do our bit in revealing this evil to the unknowing of the world. I wrote a blurb, here on Twitter, about an experience I had in the early 1990's.

I received many horrible replies and evil stories so I deleted my tweet. In the time since I have been reading tweets from you, @3Days3Nights, @martingeddes, @infinitechan and many more. I have also been reading qmap dot pub from the

So here's the thing. I've spent since 2015 talking to my MAGA friends and family, trying to initiate dialogue about how 45's whole ethos is the opposite of what they say they stand for as #Christian #evangelicals and #fundamentalists. (A thread.)

What they say they believe - love for humankind, protection of the most vulnerable, honouring marriage, intact family units - is so very clearly NOT what this administration stands for.

IS HISTORY ALL TRUE? WHAT'S IN FRONT OF OUR EYES: One great achievement of the last few 100yrs was the perception that we're the prime of civilization; that sophisticated humans only emerged a few thousand years ago. The result (conveniently) is very few Q's about "his-story":

◆ In many places, Roman ruins were found floors underground. Why? Plausibly? When many other old ruins are not? ◆ Many buildings & streets have been excavated,
